			The Puckle gun (also known as the defence gun) was a primitive crew-served, manually operated flintlock[1] revolver patented in 1718 by James Puckle (1667–1724), a British inventor, lawyer and writer. Production was highly limited and may have been as little as two guns. The Puckle gun is a tripod-mounted, single-barreled flintlock weapon fitted with a manually operated[5] revolving cylinder; Puckle advertised its main application as an anti-boarding gun for use on ships. The barrel was 3 feet (0.91 m) long with a bore of 1.25 inches (32 mm). The cylinder held 6 to 11 shots depending on configuration, and was hand-loaded with powder and shot while detached from the weapon. A note from the Seller: Around 1989 my husband Art said to me I want to show you something I want to build, so he did. He had already been very interested in doing reenactment and black powder weapons. In 1990 he bought a metal lathe so he could start building the Puckle Gun. He wanted it to be a true replica so he did a lot of research and got all the information he needed, and he started machining. Of course he worked a job during this time. Also in any of his spare time where he could get away to machine the Puckle he did, and he worked on and off of it for 30 years. In 2020 he became sick and passed away. He was only a little ways away from completing it. Art always wanted to complete it as a full replica, but he did not get the chance to finish it. He wanted to create it, so other people can enjoy and cherish it as much as he did .So I decided to put it up for auction as a really awesome piece to own and to also honor Art because he had a vision, and he spent 30 years of his life to create it. My deepest wish is that whoever does win it will treasure a lifetime of dedication and uniqueness of the Puckle Gun.
